SPARROW Surface Water Quality Model User's Guide. The model has been successful in the hydrological basin of the United States. New Zealand and other countries. the U.S. government and is recommended as a national hydrological basin water environmental management tools. The practice shows to the SPARROW model have become an important water environment management support means and indispensable tool to develop water environmental management strategy for the world. the policy provides an important basis. Summary SPARROW (watershed properties of space-based regression model) is a spatial attributes of each monitoring site within the watershed water quality data and watershed characteristics associated with modeling techniques can be its core is constituted by a set of non-linear regression equation. this The regression equation describes the non-conservative transport from a point source and non-point source pollutants through the river network ultimately to rivers. The model is used to predict pollutant load concentration even flow. and has been used to evaluate two assumptions about key sources of pollution and watershed characteristics control pollution on large spatial scales transmission. Schwartz written SPARROW surface water quality model (theoretical methods and application guide) SPARROW model User's Guide and demonstrate computer software guides the user...
